Activision Blizzard’s Transparency Report is one of the most comprehensive reports of its kind released by a Fortune 500 company. It outlines initiatives and measurable results in the company’s continuous efforts to champion employees, expand employee benefits, support the community, and foster the industry’s most welcoming and inclusive workplace. It also shares detailed data on the company’s world-class Ethics and Compliance function.

The report details many other steps taken by the company in continued support of its employees and communities, including:

- Implementing company-wide zero tolerance practices for misconduct, with corrective actions taken for 100% of substantiated cases of misconduct involving employee respondents in 2022.
- Increasing the combined percentage of women and non-binary employees in our global workforce from 24% as of November 2021 to 26% as of November 2022, with an increase in representation across all business units.
- Accelerating opportunities for diverse talent by investing approximately $19 million to launch Level Up U, a three-month training program for engineers starting out in the gaming industry.
- Continuing to promote pay equity and transparency by publishing the results of independent Global Pay Equity Reviews for the last two years, showing that globally, in both years, employees who are women, non-binary people, or who self-reported as something else earned on average $1.00 for every $1.00 earned by men for comparable work.
- Continuing to grow the Way2Play Heroes program which empowers diverse leaders among the employee population to support and champion their peers as Ethics Ambassadors, while providing feedback on how to strengthen our Ethics and Compliance program.
- Placing nearly 16,000 veterans in high-quality jobs in 2022, with nearly 114,000 total placements since 2009.

“We appreciate the productive dialogue with our shareholders about our policies, Transparency Report, and ongoing commitment to foster the most welcoming and inclusive workplace in our industry,” said Bobby Kotick, chief executive officer of Activision Blizzard. “By sharing an unfiltered view of the company, I believe we have established a new disclosure precedent not just for our company, but for all other organizations committed to workplace excellence. Maintaining a culture where each employee is respected, valued, and heard is our top priority, and we’re grateful to have the support of our shareholders in these efforts.”

In addition to serving its employees, Activision Blizzard remains focused on delivering outsized value to shareholders while delighting hundreds of millions of players around the world.

The company has delivered strong operating performance for decades, growing its market capitalization by over 600000% and delivering a cumulative total return more than three times that of the S&P500 over the last 32 years.
The complete results of the Annual Meeting will be reported in a Form 8-K to be filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in the coming days, after certification of the results by Activision Blizzard’s Inspector of Election.
